

Sarjeant Gallery

Redevelopment

Information Sheet FEBRUARY 2020

The Sarjeant Gallery Redevelopment Project

- The Sarjeant Gallery Redevelopment Project is a partnership between Whanganui District Council, Whanganui Iwi, central Government, large and small private donors and Trusts.
- The Redevelopment Project will double the size of the existing facility.
- The Redevelopment Project includes earthquake strengthening and restoration of the existing 100 year old Sarjeant Gallery; and the addition of a new, modern wing which will be joined to the rear face of the Gallery.
- The new wing will house a temperature and humidity controlled storage area for the Sarjeant's nationally significant permanent collection, further Gallery spaces, an education facility, event and function areas, staff offices, a board room, reception area, a café and retail space.
- The new wing will honour the memory of Sir Archie Te Atawhai Taiaroa, for his contribution to leadership in the Manawatū-Whanganui region and will be known as Pataka o Sir Archie John Te Atawhai Taiaroa.
- Pataka o Sir Archie John Te Atawhai Taiaroa has been designed by Warren and Mahoney Architects. The design arrived at as the result of an Australasian design competition run in 1999.
-
- The redeveloped Sarjeant Gallery Te Whare o Rehua Whanganui is currently projected to re-open in spring -2022.

Current Redevelopment Timeline

- Current - The revised design of the seismic strengthening solution for the existing Gallery has been completed and is now subject to negotiation with the principal contractor McMillan & Lockwood to ensure efficiency of construction and best value. February 2020: The conservation architect met with the main contractor to review and approve the methodology for lifting, storage and reinstatement of the timber floors.
- January 2020: In accordance with the Resource Consent granted in 2014 five oaks and four Phoenix palms were removed from the site designated for the Gallery extension, Pataka o Sir Archie John Te Atawhai Taiaroa.. New plantings will be included in the landscaping in the later stages of the development.
- January 2020: a site access and parking plan is developed and shared with the public.

Sarjeant Gallery

Redevelopment

- December 2019: The Archaeological Plan outlining the monitoring and treatment of any findings during the excavation of the site at Pukenuamu Queen's Park was submitted to Heritage New Zealand (HNZ). No digging can take place until the Archaeological Authority is granted, a process that takes a minimum of 45 working days and needs to include the depth and location of all ground penetrations including site fences and parking.
- November 2019: The existing Gallery was blessed by Te Runanga o Tupoho so that work inside the existing gallery can commence to lift and protect the timber floors ahead of strengthening and restoration works.
- In November 2019, Whanganui District Council passed a resolution to proceed with construction of the Sarjeant Gallery and to award the main construction contract to McMillan & Lockwood Group. This contract for $20M is for construction of the new wing of the Gallery. It also allowed for a variation to the contract, so it can be changed to include earthquake-strengthening of the original gallery building at a later date.
- September 2019: $12M Provincial Growth Fund grant announced by Parliamentary Under-Secretary Fletcher Tabuteau at the formal public ceremony to celebrate the Sarjeant Gallery's 100 year.
- August 2019: Request for Proposals (RFP) period closed
- May 2019: Post tension strand accepted as the seismic strengthening method and revised detailed design for the Sarjeant Gallery building underway
- April 2019: Expression of Interest document made public in Australia and NZ calling for interested contractors
- January 2019 – Detailed design underway for the new wing and alternatives sought for the seismic strengthening method to ensure best value outcome for the 100 year old building
- December 2018: Gaye Batty appointed as Project Director, Sarjeant Gallery Redevelopment. As Project Director Len Lye Centre Gaye Batty successfully delivered the Len Lye/Govett Brewster Redevelopment Project within budget and on time and has most recently as project Director led the redevelopment of the New Plymouth Airport Terminal Development
- October 2018: - Cost estimate provided by quantity surveyors for developed design exceeded funds raised.
- August – September 2018: Design phase workshops occurred to ensure building plans fit for purpose
- December 2017 – April 2018: Key consultants engaged
 - Warren and Mahoney – Architects
 - Clendon Burns Park – Structural Engineers
 - Pacific Consulting – Building Services
 - Pacific Fire – Fire Design
 - BlackYard – Electrical Design
 - Rider Levett Bucknall – Quantity Surveyors

Sarjeant Gallery

Redevelopment

-
- December 2017: Council approved the appointment of RCP to undertake Design Management to the completion of the Detailed Design.
 - 2016: Developed design drawings are prepared

Funding

- The funding for this project comes from a combination of sources: Whanganui District Council; Ministry for Culture & Heritage; Significant Projects Fund (DIA); New Zealand Lottery Grants Board; Provincial Growth Fund (MBIE); public and private trusts and a multitude of individual donations both large and small.

Sarjeant Gallery History

- The Sarjeant Gallery was founded in 1912 with a bequest of £32 000 from Whanganui farmer and land-owner Henry Sarjeant. This represents approximately $70M in today's money (this is based on a calculation of % of GDP).
- Building commenced in 1917 and was completed in 1919, and the Gallery was opened to the public for the first time on 6 September 1919.
- The Sarjeant Gallery, clad in Oamaru stone, is situated on a historically important site on Pukenamu Queen's Park overlooking Whanganui.
- It is one of New Zealand's oldest purpose built galleries.
- The neo-classical Greek-cross style building with its distinctive dome was designed by architect Donald Hosie, from the office of Edward Anson (Dunedin).
- The building is listed as a Category 1 heritage building by Heritage New Zealand. It also won an award in 2012 for Enduring Design from the New Zealand Institute of Architects.
- The Gallery currently meets only 5% of the current building code.
- The Sarjeant Gallery staff, operations and collection have been relocated to temporary premises - Sarjeant on the Quay at 38 Taupō Quay near the centre of Whanganui.
- In 1995 the Sarjeant Gallery was gifted the Maori name Te Whare o Rehua Whanganui, meaning 'House of Inspiration'.
- The re-location costs of around $2.68 million over five years were funded by a $472k Lottery Grant and Whanganui District Council

The Collection

- The Sarjeant Gallery collection has approximately 8,300 pieces spanning 400 years of international and New Zealand art history.
- Outside the main centres, the Sarjeant's collection is the largest art collection held in a regional art Gallery in New Zealand.
- Included in the collection are works in a broad range of media from paintings and works on paper to sculpture, installations, ceramics and glass.
- The Sarjeant Gallery was the first in New Zealand to begin collecting photography with the acquisition of the Denton Collection in 1925.

Sarjeant Gallery

Redevelopment

-
- The Denton Collection is the largest collection of pictorialist photography in Australasia and is of international significance, with works by photographers from Europe, USA, Australia and New Zealand.
 - The Sarjeant Gallery holds the largest collection of works by Edith Collier, over 400 items are held in the Edith Collier Trust Collection.
 - Contemporary collecting is led by the Tylee Cottage Artist in Residence Programme, the longest running artist residency in New Zealand and forms a significant body of work responding to the Whanganui region and history.
 - The entire collection can be viewed on the Sarjeant Gallery's multi-award winning digital collection portal Explore the Collection – accessible via Sarjeant.org.nz
 - The collection has been appraised by both Art + Object in Auckland and Christie's of London and was valued at approximately $30 million in 2019.
 - The collection is temporarily housed at Sarjeant on the Quay in a climate controlled facility using state of the art storage systems until the redevelopment is completed.

Resources:

- Whanganui District Council's website has a Sarjeant Gallery Redevelopment project page where timeline and construction information is kept updated.
- An information sheet and videos are available on the Sarjeant Gallery's website, where you can also find out about the Sarjeant Gallery Trust.